Miss Katie ABBOTT, Bruah NSW 2830

On the evening of 27 March 2014, Miss Katie Abbott assisted in the rescue of a man from a burning vehicle near Dubbo in New South Wales.

Miss Abbott and her partner were at their Brocklehurst property near Dubbo when they heard two loud noises. Miss Abbott immediately went out to the verandah of the house and looked towards Forest Road where she saw smoke in the trees and realised a vehicle accident had occurred. Miss Abbott and her partner jumped in their vehicle and drove to the scene. On arrival they met another person who had stopped to assist, and who had previously tried to open the driver's door of the vehicle, which was already on fire.

Miss Abbott's partner used a fire extinguisher to quell the flames on the driver and bent the vehicle's door back. He grabbed the driver but realised he was trapped. He then called to Miss Abbott to retrieve a knife. As the flames began to re-ignite, Miss Abbott who was heavily pregnant at the time, got a knife and approached the burning vehicle and handed it to her partner. Disregarding her own safety, and with the vehicle in imminent danger of exploding, she remained with her partner as he cut the driver out and pulled him from the vehicle. Assisted by the other man they carried the driver to safety as the vehicle was engulfed by fire.

Fortunately the driver, who suffered significant burns, survived the incident.

Mr Agnoletto went to his own vehicle, grabbed a carjack and gave it to the other man who smashed the passenger door window.

Mr Agnoletto moved the injured driver further away from the growing fire. With both the front, right hand side of the vehicle and the tree well alight, Mr Agnoletto, with the other man and a second passing motorist who stopped to assist, managed to pull the semi-conscious passenger out through the door window. Mr Luke William ASHMAN, 7/9 Gurrs Road, Brighton SA 5048

On the afternoon of 25 April 2014, Mr Luke Ashman attempted to rescue a man caught in a rip at Petrel Cove in South Australia.

Mr Ashman had spent the day jet skiing and surfing at Petrel Cove. He packed up his surfboard and, despite being fatigued, made his way back down to the beach to photograph the waves which, by this stage, were quite large. He noticed two people in the water who were caught in a strong rip and being washed towards the rocks. He immediately entered the rough water and made his way out to the pair. One of the men was struggling to keep the second man's head out of the water and attempting to make his way back to shore.

When Mr Ashman reached the men, the first man, due to exhaustion, released his grip on the injured man, who was unconscious, and made for the safety of the rocks. Mr Ashman held the injured man's head above the water for several minutes and attempted to swim against the rip. After being buffeted by the waves, Mr Ashman became very fatigued and was forced to release the man. He managed to swim to the rocks and remained stranded as he was unable to swim back to the beach.

Mr Bromfield and his family were asleep in their unit on Braithwaite Road when they were awoken by an explosion which had occurred in the unit directly above them. Mr Bromfield and his family quickly went outside and saw glass, rock, bricks and roofing parts spread across the ground. When he looked up, Mr Bromfield saw smoke pouring out of the unit and immediately ran upstairs to the front door, calling out for his neighbour. Mr Ronald Albert MORASSO, Kingsgrove NSW 2208

In the early morning of 12 July 2013, Mr Ronald Morasso repaired a hazardous fuel leak at the Caltex Fuel Terminal in Banksmeadow, New South Wales.

A storage tank at the terminal, which contained two million litres of unleaded petrol, was leaking approximately 2,000 litres of fuel per minute. The terminal maintenance employees were unable to close the shut-off valve at the tank. Concerned about the possibility of a major vapour explosion that would impact both the employees and residents of the surrounding area, Fire and Rescue NSW were called and quickly arrived on the scene. An Incident Management Team was immediately established. They assessed the situation and began to implement a range of strategies to prevent an explosion.

Mr Morasso, from Platoon A, 13 Station Alexandria, volunteered to enter the embankment surrounding the base of the leaking tank. By this stage there were approximately 130,000 litres of petrol in the embankment. He waded through knee-deep petrol to reach the leaking valve and was successful in shutting it off and stopping the release of any more fuel.

Fire and Rescue crews from Alexandria, Maroubra, Matraville and Mascot deployed layers of foam on the fuel which had leaked out and conducted environmental and atmospheric monitoring in the hot zone and in doing so controlled the risk of an explosion.

By his actions, Mr Morasso displayed considerable bravery.

Mr Bradley William MORRISON, 18 Rose Lea Court, Warwick Qld 4370

On the evening of 14 November 2013, Mr Bradley Morrison and another man rescued a baby from a burning vehicle at Aratula in Queensland.

Mr Morrison was driving his truck on the Cunningham Highway at Mount Edwards when he came across a two vehicle accident. A prime mover truck had collided with a Holden sedan, pushing it 95 metres along the road. The truck driver was able to climb out of his damaged vehicle before it caught fire. The female driver of the sedan was unconscious in the front seat of the vehicle, and her nine month old daughter was in the rear.

Mr Morrison got out of his truck and ran to assist. Another truck driver had also stopped, and both men approached the damaged vehicles. They saw flames coming from the engine bay of the sedan and also from the truck. The truck's fuel tank had ruptured spilling a considerable amount of diesel fuel over the roadway.

On opening the rear door of the sedan Mr Morrison and the other man discovered a baby in a booster seat. Mr Morrison leaned inside the sedan and removed the infant from its harness. At this point the flames had spread over the front of the car and the diesel fuel from the damaged truck was now ankle deep. The other man had managed to obtain a fire extinguisher and attempted to put out the flames.

Another motorist, who had stopped to render assistance, tried to open the driver's door but was forced back by the heat. Mr Morrison took the baby to safety to await the arrival of emergency services personnel. Sadly, the female driver did not survive the accident.

By his actions, Mr Morrison displayed considerable bravery.

Mr Christian Anthony PYKE, Port Lincoln SA 5606

On the morning of 25 April 2015, Mr Christian Pyke assisted in the rescue of a man who was attacked by a White Pointer shark at Fishery Bay, near Port Lincoln in South Australia.

Three friends were surfing at Fishery Bay when one of the men was attacked by a six metre shark. One of the men immediately yelled 'shark' to warn other surfers nearby, who then paddled away. The two friends then paddled towards the victim who was floundering in the water.

On their approach to the victim the shark attacked again, pulling the man under the water. When he resurfaced he was still conscious and the other two men attempted to carry him to shore on a surfboard. As they were unable to do this they both got off their boards and entered the water, despite the possibility of a further attack by the shark. Together they held the wounded man's head above water and swam him through buffeting waves towards the shore.

Mr Pyke, on witnessing the attack, and aware that the shark was still in the vicinity, jumped into the water and swam out to the trio. He gave the men the leg rope from his own surfboard which was then applied as a tourniquet to the injured man's leg. The group then made for the safety of the shore where the victim was placed into one of his friend's vehicles and driven several kilometres before reaching the ambulance which had been called, and in which treatment was then able to be administered. Fortunately, in spite of his severe injuries, the man survived.

By his actions, Mr Pyke displayed considerable bravery.
